Restoration of a prehistoric Indian ruin of Texas County, Oklahoma. This village, typical of the so called Panhandle Culture ruins, differs from those found in the Texas Panhandle in that the houses are more widely spaced than are those of Texas. Otherwise the culture is identical. Note the growing corn, the coiled basket, the round bottom pot and the metate. These are culture traits of a sedentary agricultural people. Hunting also played an important part in their life.

Caption of painting by C. Stuart Johnston (1935) in the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, Canyon, Texas. With permission of Panhandle-Plains Museum.
