Course Description:

Cultural diversity in the world is a course designed to acquaint students with social, racial, ethnic, religious, and other diversity such as gender, age and disability diversity in the world. A major goal of the course is to help the students appreciate the wealth of diversity in the world and understand how this diversity can cause both cooperation and conflict. Another goal of the course is to direct the students' attention to ways of increasing cooperation and decreasing conflict.

Course Objectives:

At the conclusion of the course the students will
Understand the ethnic and racial composition of the United States of America
Understand some of the cultural diversity of North America
Understand some of the cultural diversity of South America
Understand some of the cultural diversity of Europe
Understand some of the cultural diversity of Africa
Understand some of the cultural diversity of Asia

Text: Bryan, W.V. (2007) Multicultural Aspects of Disabilities (2nd. Ed.) Springfield IL. Charles C Thomas Publisher. ISBN 978-0-398-077709-9

Course outline:

The class will consist of a combination of lecture, discussion, and group presentations. Students will be placed in groups and assigned a topic to research and make a presentation to the class. Additionally each student will choose a topic that relates to cultural diversity and write an eight (8) page paper. The paper must contain at least six (6) references.

Sample topics for papers are: African American cultures, American Indian cultures, Hispanic/Latino cultures, Asian American cultures, disability in America, religious groups in America, issues facing the elderly in America, ethnic/racial cultural groups in Europe and disability in the world. These are only suggestions, students may select other topics. Topics must be approved by the instructor. If the student wish to begin work on the paper prior to the beginning of class she/he can email the instructor for topic approval, otherwise topic approval will be done the first day of class. The paper will be due the last week of class; therefore there will be sufficient time to complete the paper.
