Recommendations for assisting the student in meeting his or her postsecondary goals: Provide information about activities, modifications, accommodations, assistive technology, and strategies that enable the student to be successful in reaching their postsecondary goals.

John reports the most useful accommodations are use of a computer to spell check assignments, peer notes, and extended time to complete written exams. John is aware he will need to self-advocate in the college setting, seek assistance from the disability resource center before the semester begins, and provide the necessary documentation of his learning disability required by Coyle Community College.
