“US-CHINA ECONOMIC AND TRADE RELATIONS”

Ambassador Alan Holmer

Special U.S. Envoy for China and the Strategic Economic Dialogue

3:30 – 4:45pm, Thursday, Nov. 13, 2008

Gaylord College of Journalism

2nd Fl. Library (395 W. Lindsey)

President George W. Bush and Chinese President Hu Jintao established the Strategic Economic Dialogue (SED) in September 2006, as a high-level mechanism to manage mutual concerns in the US-China economic relationship. Ambassador Holmer is the SED's Special Envoy. He is former president of PHARMA and a former Deputy U.S. Trade Representative (USTR). This public talk and question and answer session will address the full range of U.S. government priorities as they relate to our relationship with China, such as energy and the environment, financial service sector reform, investment, consumer safety, and Chinese currency reform.
