Nazila Fathi is a journalist, translator and commentator on Iran who reported on Iran for nearly two decades. She was a correspondent for the New York Times in Iran from 2001-2009, writing over 2,000 articles. Fathi is the translator of Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Shirin Ebadi’s book History and Documentation of Human Rights in Iran. She received her Master’s of Arts in Political Science from the University of Toronto in 2001. She is the recipient of numerous fellowships, including: the Raoul Wallenberg Fellowship at Lund University, a Nieman Fellowship for journalism at Harvard University and a Shorenstein Fellowship at the Harvard Kennedy School. In her latest book The Lonely War: One Woman’s Account of the Struggle for Modern Iran, Fathi blends her own story, historical analysis, and interviews with Iranian intellectuals, dissidents and politicians, revealing how the Iranian Revolution divided the country’s people - and surprisingly, how it might unite them once more.
