All people are affected by the security-related decisions their governments make. However, the world’s women face unique challenges, and in some cases have surprising advantages, based solely on their sex.

This course examines women as a category in the international arena. Students explore how women are affected by international politics and correspondingly how women affect international security.