Program Student Learning Outcomes

College:  Arts & Science
Program:  Native American Studies, MA

Upon completion of the M.A. in Native American Studies, students should be able to:

- Use methods from the disciplines of history, ethno-history, anthropology, literary theory, Federal Indian law, and Indigenous epistemology in research on American Indian topics. Several graduate students applied combinations of theoretical practices and methodologies in research and development of their Master’s theses. In each case, original research was contributed and added to evolving discourse and scholarship in American Indian and Native American Studies.