Program Student Learning Outcomes

College: Business
Program: Management Information Technology, MS

Graduates of the MS in Management Information Technology should be able to demonstrate:

- The ability to model information systems and their requirements.
- The ability to problem-solve in relation to IT concerns and applications.
- The ability to communicate technical information to non-technical business professionals.
- An understanding of the business, organizational, and regulatory context of information technology and organizational information systems.
- An understanding of how information technology and systems can be leveraged to provide business value.