This exhibition, organized by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, includes more than 100 drawings, models, and furnishings from Goff's long and distinguished career. The exhibit ranges from drawings of the superb prairie-style houses Goff designed in the late teens and those for the zestful Art Deco buildings designed in the late 1920s to the still more flamboyant work of his later career, including his last work, the Los Angeles County Museum of Art's Pavilion for Japanese Art. Of special interest to Oklahomans will be the drawings for the 60 Goff homes and buildings in this state, including the famous Bavinger House, located near Norman.

Pavilion for Japanese Art at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Designed by Bruce Goff, working drawings by Bart Prince.