Eric Haskell

Eric T. Haskell is a professor of French literature and humanities at Scripps College, Claremont University Center, California, and Director of the Clark Humanities Museum. His scholarly interests have focused on garden history, landscape aesthetics, and the interrelations between literature and art. He has authored articles on Baudelaire, Flaubert, Nerval Huysmans and Rimbaud, and organized exhibitions and symposia on garden history.

Haskell "discovered" the landscape photographs of Kenna in 1992, and has since curated several exhibitions of his work, including the one at the Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art.

He and James J. Yoch will conduct a symposium on "Formalism in the Garden," based on the le Nôtre photographs, August 28 at the museum.

###