University Art Museum Offers Tuesday Noon Concerts

NORMAN – Live music is back for Tuesday lunch hours at the Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art at the University of Oklahoma. The museum’s free weekly Tuesday Noon Concerts series returns Feb. 5 in the museum’s Sandy Bell Gallery.

A collaboration of the OU School of Music and the FJJMA, Tuesday Noon Concerts offer a 30-minute concert each Tuesday through April 23 featuring OU music students and faculty.

The Violin Studio, under the direction of music professor Hal Grossman, heads up the series Feb. 5, followed by the Boomer Bass Ensemble led by Professor Anthony Stoops on Feb. 12. Additional concerts this spring include computer music, an opera preview, harp, clarinet, piano, percussion, flute and guitar. The series concludes April 23 with OU alumni Leslie John Flanagan, singer, and Jake Johnson, piano accompanist.

“Why not take a break from the office and spend your lunch hour listening to talented musicians?” said Chelsea Julian, membership development officer for the museum. “This is a great collaboration between the museum and the OU School of Music. It’s also a wonderful opportunity for the community to see what fine arts students and faculty are achieving this spring as well as what’s new at the museum.”

A complete listing of upcoming Tuesday Noon Concerts dates and performers is available online at www.ou.edu/fjjma. Some Tuesday Noon Concerts may be followed by informal exhibition gallery talks at 12:30 p.m.; the museum’s full spring calendar is available on the museum’s website.

The Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art is located in the OU Arts District on the corner of Elm Avenue and Boyd Street, at 555 Elm Ave., on the OU Norman campus.
