University of Oklahoma, Norman OK. Two one-year non-renewable Dissertation Fellowships beginning fall 2016. These positions will be associated with the Institute for the Study of Human Flourishing, a major new initiative on virtue and flourishing funded in part by a generous grant from the John Templeton Foundation (see http://www.ou.edu/flourish). Significant research focus must be on issues related to character, virtue, or flourishing broadly construed. The dissertation fellowships are research positions with no teaching responsibilities, intended for mid- or later-stage students who will likely complete their dissertations during the term of the fellowship, which will begin on August 16, 2016 and end on May 15, 2017. Candidates should send a short cover letter, the names of three references, CV, a writing sample, and a two-page dissertation abstract and progress report by email attachment to flourish@ou.edu, or if that is not possible, to The Institute for the Study of Human Flourishing, 620 Parrington Oval, #208, Norman, OK 73019. The deadline for receipt of applications is February 12, 2016. The University of Oklahoma is an equal employment opportunity employer.