Course Title: Seminar in Modern Japanese History: Remembering Wartime in Japan

Course Number: HIST 6800-104

Course Description: The terms used to describe the period during which Japan was at war in the mid-twentieth century demonstrate how naming and memory work together. The “Pacific War,” “Fifteen Year War,” “World War II,” “Asia-Pacific War,” and the “Greater East Asian War” are all terms used to refer to the same general time period and series of events, but have different specific—and often very political—meanings. This course will examine the events and experiences of wartime Japan, the ways they have been remembered by groups and by individuals (inside Japan and in other countries), and the ways they have been put to political use. The course will start before the beginning of hostilities in Asia in 1937 and deal with the entirety of the wartime experience to 1945, as well as the changing ways the war has been remembered during the Cold War and beyond. We will examine the way memories of the war have changed and helped shape domestic politics, international relations and national identity in Japan, China and the United States up to the present.

Optional Purchase:

Students who wish to have a better grounding in 20th century Japanese history and the significant changes to Japan’s politics, economy and society that provided the backdrop for imperial expansion, war, and eventual defeat, may wish to read selections from one of the widely available textbooks. I would recommend in particular Andrew Gordon’s A Modern History of Japan: From Tokugawa Times to the Present (Oxford), or Kenneth Pyle’s The Making of Modern Japan. I also highly recommend the following title, which provides not only models for correct footnote and bibliographic forms, but also useful tips on researching and writing a history paper: Mary Lynn Rampolla, A Pocket Guide to Writing in History, 7th ed. (Bedford/St. Martin’s) ISBN-10: 0312610416.

Note on Course Workload:

This is a history seminar, and as such has a substantial amount of required reading. The reading is not supplementary, but rather constitutes the backbone of the course and thus must be completed before our in-class seminar begins. Many required readings as well as all assignments, special instructions, and learning aides will be posted to D2L. It is crucial that you read through the announcements on D2L as soon as you become enrolled in the course, and check back frequently to review materials and to see if there have been additional materials posted. You should also be sure to order your books well in advance, so that you have enough time to complete your pre-class paper and your course reading.

Course Objectives:

- To understand the history of Japan’s road to militarism and its war in Asia and with the United States;
- To understand the key debates in Japan, China and the United States involving memories of the Asia-Pacific War;
- To learn to analyze the politics of memory in its historical context.

Course Outline:

Class sessions will consist of a combination of lecture, discussion, and video presentations, with special emphasis on the discussion component. Students will be expected to be able to discuss readings thoughtfully and intelligently, and to make connections among those readings and lecture/video materials. To this end, all assigned readings must be completed before our weeklong seminar begins. Each student should expect to make a short presentation summarizing and evaluating a reading assignment at least once during our week of class. (The exact number of presentations expected of each student will depend on course enrollment, and assignments will be announced the week before the on-site seminar begins.) Since students are not expected to have any prior knowledge of Japanese history, several hour-long lectures will focus on Japan’s path toward modernity, imperial expansion, the road to war, and postwar occupation.

Class discussion will be the central focus of our seminar, and will focus on readings assigned for the day. Each student will be expected to engage in discussion with insightful comments and questions during every class period. All readings listed below will either be a book required for purchase, essays and selections available on D2L as a PDF file, or essays available from the website japanfocus.org.

Monday, January 27
Lecture: The Meiji Restoration/First Modern Wars
Discussion: Dower, “Race, Language and War in Two Cultures” (D2L); Ienaga, Pacific War, 1931-1945

Discussion: Yabuki Susumu (interview), “China-Japan Territorial Conflicts and the US-Japan-China Relations in Historical and Contemporary Perspective” (access at japanfocus.org); Lawrence Repeta, “Japan’s Democracy at Risk – The LDP’s Ten Most Dangerous Proposals for Constitutional Change” (access at japanfocus.org); Inoue, “We Are Okinawans of a Different Kind” (D2L)

Sunday, February 2
Final Exam (identifications, closed book; essay, open book)
Assignments, Grading and Due Dates:

Pre-class paper:
Due on Saturday, January 11, this 5-page paper should examine and assess Yoshida’s book The Making of the “Rape of Nanking”. Your paper should offer a cogent summary of Yoshida’s main arguments, discuss the kinds of sources and methods he uses to make those arguments, and evaluate the effectiveness of those arguments. Do not use any outside sources for this paper (books, articles, websites). This is to be YOUR reading of Yoshida’s book. For additional guidelines, see “How to write a book review” PDFs on D2L. You may also wish to refer to the optional book by Rampolla (listed in syllabus above) for help with writing a critical review.

Participation:
Participation is expected from each student during every class. Your participation grade will be determined by the quality of your contributions rather than on quantity alone. Each student will be expected to give one or more brief (five minute) presentation on an assigned reading during the seminar week, and these also will count towards your participation grade.

Final Examination:
Your final exam will take place during our last class session. The exam will consist of a closed-book short identification section, and an open book essay section. A prep sheet for the final examination will be available on D2L no later than the first day of class.

Post-seminar paper:
Due on Saturday, February 22, this 10 to 12-page paper should focus on an aspect of war memory in Japan. While students must use some of the sources we have read in class that are appropriate for their chosen topic, papers should also include the use of several outside sources. A list of possible paper topics will be posted to D2L before our seminar begins. Students may choose topics not on the list only if the professor approves them in advance. Students should upload a proposed topic (described in a sentence or two) to the D2L dropbox by the first day of class. Students should also plan on discussing their topic and research plan with the instructor during the week of our seminar, and are encouraged to email or request an online chat with the professor before or after the seminar week to discuss or ask questions about their topic or paper. Papers should include footnotes and bibliography using appropriate style.

Please note: while the instructor recognizes that deployments, official travel and other work-related issues may require some adjustments to the due date of the final paper for certain individuals, there will not be an opportunity to resubmit papers for higher grades after your initial submission. The instructor will be available to give advice and guidance up until the time you submit the final paper, but you may not “revise and resubmit” once the paper has been graded. Your final paper should represent your best work. Please consult the Rampolla book (see “Optional Purchase” above) and material on D2L for information on how to approach a research paper, how to properly cite references, write footnotes and bibliographies, etc.

Grading:
This is a letter-graded course: A, B, C, or F

POLICIES AND NOTICES

Attendance/Grade Policy

Attendance and participation in interaction, individual assignments, group exercises, simulations, role playing, etc. are valuable aspects of any course because much of the learning comes from discussions in class with other students. It is expected that you attend all classes and be on time except for excused emergencies.

Excused absences are given for professor mandated activities or legally required activities such as emergencies or military assignments. Unavoidable personal emergencies, including (but not limited to) serious illness; delays in getting to class because of accidents, etc.; deaths and funerals, and hazardous road conditions will be excused.

If you are obtaining financial assistance (TA, STAP, FA, VA, Scholarship, etc.) to pay all or part of your tuition cost, you must follow your funding agency/institution’s policy regarding “I” (Incomplete) grades unless the timeline is longer than what the University policy allows then you must adhere to the University policy.

Students who receive Financial Aid must resolve/complete any “I” (Incomplete) grades by the end of the term or he/she may be placed on “financial aid probation.” If the “I” grade is not resolved/completed by the end of the following term, the student’s Financial Aid may be suspended make the student ineligible for further Financial Aid.

Students are responsible for meeting the guidelines of Tuition Assistance and Veterans Assistance. See the education counselor at your local education center for a complete description of your TA or VA requirements.

Academic Honesty

Honesty is a fundamental precept in all academic activities and … [you] have a special obligation to observe the highest standards of honesty. Academic misconduct in any form is inimical to the purposes and functions of the University and is therefore unacceptable and is rigorously proscribed. Academic misconduct includes:

- cheating (using unauthorized materials, information, or study aids in any academic exercise), plagiarism, falsification of records, unauthorized possession of examinations, intimidation, and any and all other actions that may improperly affect the evaluation of a student’s academic performance or achievement;
- assisting others in any such act; or attempting to engage in such acts.

All acts of academic misconduct will be reported and adjudicated as prescribed by the student code of the University of Oklahoma. All students should review the “Student’s Guide to Academic Integrity” found at http://www.ou.edu/provost/integrity

Accommodation Statement

The College of Continuing Education [Advanced Programs] is committed to making its activities as accessible as possible. For accommodations on the basis of disability, please contact your OU Site Director.

Course Policies

Advanced Programs policy is to order books in paperback if available. Courses, dates, and professors are subject to change. Please check with your OU Site Director. Students should retain a copy of any assignments that are mailed to the professor for the course. Advanced Programs does not provide duplicating services or office supplies.
