(2007)

with co-director
Shane Loader
& Maori actor
Rangimoana Taylor

Thursday September 18th 7 pm
MEACHAM AUDITORIUM
OU Memorial Union
90 Asp Avenue

This contemporary New Zealand film is a dramatic comedy centered around a young Maori, who after the accidental death of his brother, is helped by friends and father (Rangimoana Taylor) to live on with love, laughter, soccer, music and forgiveness.

This event has been chosen to complement the September 19th World Literature Today award ceremony for the Neustadt International Prize for Literature which will be given to Patricia Grace, the well-known New Zealand Maori writer .

The film evening is also being made possible by Jeanne Hoffman Smith, Richard Dulaney, Campus Activities Council Speakers Bureau , the OU College of Honors, and the OU Union Programming Board.
