

25 Years of Cooper

Folsom Bison Hunting and Beyond

Talk and Reception

7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16
Robert S. Kerr Auditorium

2018 marks the 25th anniversary of the discovery of the bison kill at the Cooper site in Harper County, Oklahoma. The site is best known for the 10,000-year-old painted bison skull, the earliest painted object ever found in the Americas.

Sam Noble Oklahoma Museum of Natural History

In this public lecture, Leland Bement, the archaeologist who led the excavations at Cooper, describes the discovery itself and details about what we have learned about Paleoindian bison hunting in the 25 years since it was found.
