VACANCY ANNOUNCEMENT

GENERAL INFORMATION

Rank: Assistant Professor, full-time, tenure-track, benefits eligible, 9-month faculty appointment.

The University of Oklahoma's School of Music invites applications for a tenure-track position in musicology at the rank of Assistant Professor, to start on August 14, 2023. We seek candidates who specialize in the music of the early modern era with expertise in historically informed performance. Expertise in a secondary area that complements the strengths of the existing musicology faculty is welcome.

POSITION DESCRIPTION

- Teach a 2 + 2 course load. This load may include undergraduate courses for music majors, graduate-level seminars on renaissance and baroque era music, research and bibliography, leading the Collegium Musicum, and new courses related to the applicant's other interests and area(s) of expertise.
- Build and maintain an active research program. Establish a record of creative activity and/or research productivity in national and international venues.
- Mentor and advise graduate students.
- Participate fully in service, including School of Music and University governance committees and other duties as assigned by the director.

REQUIRED QUALIFICATIONS

- Ph.D. in Musicology or D.M.A. in Historically Informed Performance. Applicants who are ABD with an expected date of completion in May 2023 will be considered.
- Scholarly excellence through written work, either through a record of scholarly publication or strong evidence of the potential for publication.
- Undergraduate-level teaching experience.

DESIRED QUALIFICATIONS

- Experience teaching music majors or graduate students.
- Experience leading an early music ensemble.
- A developed secondary area of specialization that complements the course offerings and research strengths of existing faculty in terms of time periods, geographical regions, musical genres, or methodological approaches.
- A commitment to contribute to the vitality of the academic community within the School of Music and across the University through teaching, performing, and service.
