

Inspired by the past, looking to the future

Caddo Nation potter Chase Kahwinhut Earles pitfires in the traditional way. He, like many artists from Oklahoma's thirty-nine resident tribes, is actively revitalizing ancient traditions — partly inspired by the archaeological record — in contemporary contexts, and is helping archaeologists understand age-old creative practices.

Oklahoma Archaeology Month

October 2019 - okpan.org

OAM is sponsored by the Oklahoma State Historic Preservation Office, the Oklahoma Archeological Survey, and the Oklahoma Public Archaeology Network. Photography by Travis Caperton and graphic design by Denise Canon.
