Course Title:
Terror Management Theory and Communication

Course Number:
COMM 5960-422

Course Description:
Terror Management Theory (TMT; Greenberg, Pyszczynski, & Solomon, 1986), essentially posits that humans are motivated to alleviate the potential for existential anxiety (i.e., terror) inherent in the inescapable awareness of their mortality, and a wide range of superficially distinct forms of human behavior are oriented toward the pursuit of self-esteem and faith in a cultural worldview (CWV) based on the anxiety buffering utility of these two constructs. TMT posits that because culture serves a death-denying function, the existence of differing CWVs undermines one’s own defense against the fear of death, leading to potentially devastating intergroup strife.

This course will examine the empirical research generated by the theory over the past 20 years, drawing from over 300 studies conducted in a dozen countries around the world. We will address a wide range of human social phenomena fundamentally tied to communication behavior, including the nature of self-esteem motivation, self-awareness, romantic and interpersonal attachment, sexuality and attraction, physical health, risk taking, creativity, needs for structure and meaning, unconscious cognition, group identification, political preferences, prejudice, disgust, aggression, stereotyping, religion, and martyrdom.

Online Learning Resource Center:
The Online Learning Resource Center of the University of Oklahoma’s College of Arts and Sciences Online Program is here to serve you and assist you with any questions, problems, or concerns you may have. Course Objectives:
1. Develop a basic understanding of the theory relevant to socio-psychological processes.
2. Comprehend the general findings of empirical research in support of TMT.
3. Consider and evaluate the application of TMT to various interpersonal, intercultural and international issues.

Assignments, Grading, and Due Dates:
There will be one paper and one related PowerPoint (PPT) presentation. The paper will correspond to material from the text and readings, and be accompanied by a self-narrated PPT presentation summarizing its content dealing with an issue raised within a chapter of the text or one or more of the supplemental readings.

The paper should synthesize the readings with students’ personal experiences and understandings about interpersonal and/or intercultural, and/or international interaction relevant to and informed by TMT. Each PPT presentation should run approximately 20 minutes (see instructions and assignment due dates below).

The paper should be 13-17 pages of double-spaced text, in APA format with separate title page, abstract page, and reference section (i.e., 19 page max not counting references), and provide an assessment of the relevant empirical evidence found in the literature. You do not necessarily have to choose an aspect of the theory you agree with, you may choose to take a critical approach. A handout on APA format for the paper, and instructions on how to prepare a self-narrated PPT presentation are available via the course website on D2L.

Papers should address an issue of interest concerning an aspect of social cognition and/or human behavior as it relates to terror management processes and communication. The topic for this assignment may come from the textbook, supplemental readings or any other source. The paper will (a) summarize current literature relevant to the issue; (b) feature and explicate a TMT perspective applicable to the topic; and (c) review (or suggest) relevant empirical research. This paper should include a 100 word abstract and follow APA format.

Students will first submit a short proposal introducing the topic they wish to address and some potential sources. Once the proposal has been accepted work may begin on the paper. All work must be original. For information about the nature of plagiarism and other issues related to academic integrity, see: http://www.ou.edu/provost/integrity/

Each student will read and evaluate each of the other student’s papers, and view and evaluate each of the other’s PPT presentations. Regarding the papers, you should look for how others highlight important aspects of the material they present and how they support their points with empirical evidence from the literature. Regarding the PPT presentations, base your assessments on how polished each project is, and how it complements and clarifies its accompanying paper. A criteria sheet for evaluating and rating these assignments will be available on D2L.
