SENATE SESSION GF25

December 4, 2025

SENATE RESOLUTION GF25-21

AS INTRODUCED

A Senatorial Resolution calling on the University and its administration to provide additional transparency regarding administrative leave for graduate teaching assistants; calling on the University to provide additional protection for graduate teaching assistants in the course of investigations; and providing for distribution.

- Whereas: The Graduate Student Senate (GSS) at the University of Oklahoma was established to represent the interests of graduate students at the university and to serve their needs.
- Whereas: On November 25, 2025, news articles and social media posts began circulating with reports that a graduate student instructor at the University had been placed on leave after having assigned a failing grade to an undergraduate student's assignment.¹
- Whereas: The undergraduate student alleges that she was given a failing grade because she had cited the Bible in her paper, accusing the graduate instructor of religious discrimination.
- Whereas: Following these initial reports, The Oklahoman newspaper published the undergraduate's assignment along with the assignment instructions, graduate instructor's comments on the grade, and the comments of another OU faculty member who had been consulted on the grade.²
- Whereas: Following the media attention garnered by this case, many hateful and abusive comments have been posted online in a clear campaign to bully and harass the graduate student instructor.
- Whereas: Many of these bullying and harassing comments have been actively stoked by the undergraduate student, her mother, and Turning Point USA, a politically oriented organization that has a registered chapter at OU.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA GRADUATE STUDENT SENATE THAT:

- Section 1: Title: This resolution shall be known and may be cited as the “Call to Action regarding the University’s responsibilities to students in investigations.”
- Section 2: GSS asserts that, based on our reading of published documents, *the graduate instructor was fully justified in assigning a failing grade to the assignment*². Rather than responding to the assigned prompt, the undergraduate student submitted an extended exposition of her own interpretation of the Bible in language that appears to have been intentionally inflammatory and hateful. While GSS fully supports the First Amendment rights of all students to believe, worship, and practice their religion in accordance with their personal convictions, and to exercise their freedom of speech, this does not entitle any student to a certain grade on an assignment. Regardless of a student’s individual beliefs, they are required to submit assignments that respond to the assigned prompts and that follow the provided rubrics. When failing to do so, the student should receive failing grades on the corresponding assignments.
- Section 3: GSS maintains that dismissing the accusations against the graduate instructor is essential to preserving the University’s academic integrity. Allowing these claims to stand would cause lasting harm to both students and the institution’s reputation. It would create a precedent in which any student could insert a statement of personal religious belief into an assignment, regardless of its relevance, and then allege religious discrimination if the content is graded according to the rubric. Such a precedent would discourage graduate instructors and faculty from evaluating work based on established academic standards, ultimately undermining the quality of instruction students pay for. Moreover, if these accusations were upheld, external employers and academic institutions could reasonably conclude that OU grants grades and degrees without requiring students to demonstrate genuine learning through coursework, exams, and honest evaluation. Upholding these claims would call into questions the value and credibility of an OU degree, suggesting that academic outcomes can be influenced by unfounded accusations rather than merit.
- Section 4: GSS is concerned for the physical, mental, and emotional wellbeing of the graduate student instructor given the level and intensity of harassing and bullying comments that have been made online. These comments are completely inappropriate and potentially interfere with the integrity of the University’s process for investigating the claims made by the undergraduate student. It is the responsibility of the University and its administration to condemn such comments and to protect their students and employees from this type of harassment. The University and its administration have utterly failed to curtail this harassment in any way.
- Section 5: Given the facts, assertions, and concerns above, GSS calls on the University of Oklahoma and its administration to do the following:
1. Within the bounds of the law, provide a detailed, written explanation of the policies and procedures that were followed and continue to be followed as this case is investigated. If the law prevents the disclosure of any of this information, the University and its administration should provide a written explanation detailing which law prevents the disclosure.

2. Within the bounds of the law, provide a detailed explanation and rationale for why the graduate instructor was placed on administrative leave. If the law prevents the disclosure of any of this information, the University and its administration should provide a written explanation detailing which law prevents the disclosure.
3. Provide a formal, public apology to the graduate instructor for the University's failure to protect them from the bullying and harassment the attention on this case has garnered.
4. Provide a specific and detailed plan for how the University will provide protection against bullying and harassment towards the graduate instructor moving forward.
5. Provide a public condemnation of the bullying and harassment that has been directed toward the graduate instructor, including a specific condemnation of all harassing behavior exhibited by the undergraduate student, her mother, and Turning Point USA.
6. Provide a clear and specific list of what actions will be taken by the University if such harassing behavior continues towards the graduate instructor and all other members of the University community.
7. A swift and fair resolution to the University's investigation, including a final decision on the graduate instructor's position within the University.
8. Initiate a process involving GSS to establish a formal set of guidelines, applicable to all Graduate Teaching Assistants and OU faculty, for how to manage and design classroom discussions and assignments that deal with sensitive topics following similar guidelines adopted by other peer R1 universities.³

Section 6: GSS implores the University's administration to carefully consider what precedent their decision will set for the academic integrity of this University, the safety of its students, and the ability of the University to serve the students who have entrusted their education to OU.

Section 7: GSS condemns, in no uncertain terms, the harassment that has been directed towards the graduate instructor.

Section 8: In making this appeal to the University's administration, GSS stands in solidarity with the graduate student instructor and will continue to advocate for their rights, their safety, and their wellbeing. GSS will advocate of the rights, safety, and wellbeing of all OU graduate students.

Section 9: Copies of this resolution will be sent to:

- Joseph Harroz, Jr., President of the University of Oklahoma
- André-Denis Wright, Senior Vice President and Provost of the University of Oklahoma
