Risk Manager and Prevention Specialist

Taylor Bradberry is a higher education professional and leadership educator passionate about empowering students and developing strong, values-driven leaders. She currently serves as the Risk Manager and Prevention Specialist where she oversees education and outreach efforts, student organization conduct oversight, conflict resolution training, and contributes to a campus culture that prioritizes student well-being, accountability, and growth.

Taylor is a Georgia native. She obtained her bachelors of science in Kinesiology and minor in Psychology from the University of North Georgia. She moved to Oklahoma in 2022 to start at UCO. She served as the Coordinator of Student Engagement for Fraternity & Sorority Life at the University of Central Oklahoma, where she advised three governing councils, supported 27 student organizations, and lead initiatives focused on leadership development, community standards, and risk management. Taylor is currently pursuing a Master of Arts in Organizational Leadership at the University of Oklahoma, where she is expanding her expertise in leadership theory, team development, and organizational effectiveness.

Before moving to Oklahoma, Taylor served as an International Leadership Consultant for Delta Phi Epsilon, which is her sorority affiliation, providing in-person and virtual support to collegiate chapters across the country to provide leadership coaching and educational workshops. She is actively involved in professional and community organizations, including the Association of Fraternity & Sorority Advisors, the Junior League of Oklahoma City, the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma Young Professionals Leadership Class, and serves as a chapter advisor for Beta Theta Pi Fraternity at Truman State. Taylor enjoys spending time with her dog, Herschel, partner, family, friends, running, and watching movies. Through her professional and personal endeavors, she has valued inclusive leadership, empowerment, and the development of student leaders to reach their potential.
